There's an old saying that goes "You know your band is getting huge when your name is up on a billboard."

OK, I just made that up, but it's true and something our very own Larry and His Flask realized recently when they got their collective eyeballs on this massive billboard (seen above) in Las Vegas pumping up the upcoming Dropkick Murphys show that the band is opening on August 6.

I saw this photo on their Facebook page and figured it was worth sharing, especially because LAHF is headlining the Rise Up benefit concert at Boondocks tomorrow night. The show is at 7pm and also includes music from Mosley Wotta and live body painting (ooooohhh) from local tattoo artist Mike Toth.
