

Poor Man's Whiskey Returns to Bend for Outdoor Show

Written by Mike Bookey
Monday, 02 August 2010 08:22

One of Bend's favorite bands -- and one that keeps coming back a couple times a year -- Poor Man's Whiskey will play an outdoor show this summer. It's slated for August 14th and the location is the West Wind Ranch

(home to a music festival just a few weekends back) out in Tumalo.

The show was originally billed as a private gig, but with tickets available online, it's now open to the public.

Brought to you by 4 Peaks Presents (and taking place almost two years to the date after the last 4 Peaks Music Festival), the show also features Bay Area jammers

Ten Mile Tide

, locals Wild Rye and former

Blue Turtle Seduction

front man Jay Seals, and possibly some other acts.

I haven't heard if Poor Man's Whiskey has any special tricks up their sleeves (probably not going to be a "Dark Side of the Moonshine" performance), but the band has been known to go full throttle with their Americana-meets-arena-rock style.

The all-day (1pm-10pm) show is family friendly -- including pony rides! -- and features on site camping for those who want to get the full festival experience.

Click here for tickets.

Poor Man's Whiskey Returns to Bend for Outdoor Show

Written by Mike Bookey

Monday, 02 August 2010 08:22
